Details of Session: -

The session on "Cloud Computing and Future Business Models" for the MBA batch, held on 29th January 2019, was facilitated by Nitin Balke, General Manager at Siemens. The session began with an engaging keynote address by Nitin Balke, who provided an in-depth overview of the evolution of cloud computing and its profound impact on business operations and entrepreneurship. Following this, detailed discussions covered the fundamentals of cloud computing, including its various service models (IaaS, PaaS, SaaS), and highlighted the numerous benefits such as scalability, cost-efficiency, and flexibility. Participants also learned about the challenges associated with cloud adoption, particularly in terms of security and compliance.

The latter part of the session focused on how cloud computing enables innovative business models and supports entrepreneurial ventures. Through insightful case studies and interactive panel discussions, participants explored future trends such as edge computing, hybrid cloud solutions, and AI integration. The session included an interactive workshop where MBA students engaged in group discussions, hands-on activities with cloud tools, and collaborative problem-solving exercises. This practical approach equipped the students with the knowledge and skills needed to develop and implement effective cloud strategies in their future careers.
